Population of the United States and Territories. INTERESTING COMPARISONS.

The eighth census of the United States, taken in the month of June of last year, has been officially ascertained and made public. Compared with the last census, taken in June, 1850, it shows the following aggregate per cent. results in the several States and Territories: Free pop'u19,987,563 Free pop'u27,477,090 Slave 3,204,313 | Slave 3,952,801

Total23,191,876 Total31,429,891 The free population has, since 1850, increased 7,489,537, and the slaves 748,488. Total increase in ten years 8,238,025 souls.

The following summary gives the free and slave population of each State; the representation in the next Congress, and the losses and gains in the congressional representation in the several States, together with the geographical divisions of the country, the increase and decrease of population in each, and other interesting facts, for which we are indebted to the New York Tribune:

· Gain in ten years, 407,185, or 15 per ct.

By the new ratio for representation, New England loses four members of Congress. Vermont has stood still, showing only 996 increase in ten years, or less than one-third of one per cent. Maine grows only 45,107, or less than eight per cent. New Hamp shire only 8,096, or a little more than two and a half per cent. This shows that the agricultural population of these cold region migrates rapidly to the more fruitful soil and temperate climate of the West. In the manufacturing sections of New England especially in the villages, the growth has necticut, 89,357, nearly 25 per cent.
